

GOLDEN RESEARCH THOUGHTS

SCULPTURES OF VYAGHRAPADESVARAR TEMPLE AT SIDDHALINGAMADAM

M. Dhanasekaran

Ph.D., Research Scholar, Department of History, Annamalai University, Annamalai Nagar.

Abstract :

The concept of social security has been mentioned in the early vedic hymn which wishes everyone to be happy, free from ill-health, enjoy a bright future and suffer no sorrow. The phrase, 'Social security' is therefore, a new name for an old aspiration. Today it is based on the "Ideals of human dignity and social justice".

Keywords: Social Security Measures, Physically Disabled, social justice.

Sculptures Of Vyaghrapadesvarar Temple At Siddhalingamadam

INTRODUCTION

Sculpture is the branch of the visual arts that operates in three dimensions. It is one originally used carving (the removal of Material) and Modeling (the addition of Material, as clay), in stone, Metal ceramic, wood and other Materials but, since Modernism, shifts in sculptural process led to an almost complete freedom of Materials and process. A wide variety of Materials may be worked by removal such as carving, assembled by welding or modeling, or molded, or cast.

The history of Sculpture is as old as the history of mankind. It has appeared in almost every culture of the world. Indian Sculpture is not only valued as an object of worship but also as a work of art. Merely building the temple, carving the images, Molding and shaping the idols cannot be done according to our own wishes or desires for which rules are laid down strictly in the agamas and silapasastras and they should accordingly be followed. Certain Silpa texts and agamas specifically point out the iconographic details and lay down the data for the Measurements and Molding of the Sculptures.

LOCATION

Siddhalingamadam is a small village in Tirukkivilur Taluk of Villupuram District in Tamil nadu. Siddhalingamadam Siringur of the inscription lies at a distance 8 k.m southeast of Tirukkivilur the Taluk headquarters. On the southern bank of river pennai. It is surrounded by natural caverns archaic hillocks.

DAKSHINAMURTI

Dakshinamurti is one among the lilamurtis according to Saivasiddhanta. He, the lord of wisdom, is depicted always in sitting posture. The Dakshinamurti theme was popular in iconographical presentation since at least the beginning of the eighth century A.D. of which specimens are found in the Pandya monolithic at Kalugumalai and Pallava monuments at Mamallapuram and other place. He is known as cosmic guru, the treasure house of all knowledge. Since siva was seated facing south (Dakshina) when he taught the sages in a secluded spot on the Himalayas he is called Dakshinamurti. The image of the great teacher sitting under pipal tree surrounded by four sages and by the animals of the forest clearly is derived from that of Buddha preaching his first sermon in the deer park of saranath.

In the later Chola temples, the standard pattern as it had been developed by the Pallavas, with Dakshinamurti in the southern Vimana devakostha seems to have been followed without exemption. In the large temples, the Devakostha images are often repeated on the upper tier or tiers.

In the devakostha of the south wall of shine, a Dakshinamurti image showing the gentle and compassionate characteristics of the lord is depicted sitting in Virasana. He is flanked on the either side of the lateral wall by four disciples.

The right leg of the lord is placed on the apasmara (Muyalaka) indicating the suppression of illusion and ignorance. His head dress is Jadamahuda. The smiling countenance of the face suggests the movements of the lips which pronounce mantra to the disciples. He wears an exuberant hara, a vastra Yajnopavita and a pleasing Udharabanda. The Keyura and the wristlets are beautifully carved. The upper hand of the lord holds a serpent while the left upper hand carries akshamala (rosary). The right lower hand shows the gnamudra (chin) while the lower left hand holds a book, the symbol of philosophical contemplation.

LINGODBHAVA

Lingodbhava is an aspect of siva as an endless pillar of light resembling a linga and representing the axis of manifestation developing from the point limit (bindu), the centre of the Universe. The worshippers of the Hindu trio (siva, Vishnu and Brahma) and the emergence of siva cult as a superior one. According to saivasiddhanta, this aspect is one of the twenty five Lilamurties and Siva. Shine have Lingodbhavamurti specimens in the central niches of their west walls. The linga is tall, massive and cylindrical. Siva here wears Jatamakuta, patra and makarakundalas, (broad pearl decorated) hara, Yajnopavita with triple bend. Udharabanda and girdle. The chandrakara emerging from the linga and Brahma and Vishnu in their zoomorphic form on the top and bottom of the Linga respectively.

BRAHMA

Brahma is one among the Hindu trio. He is also known by various names such as caturmukha (the four faced), pitamaha (the great father), prajapati (lord of animate beings) and so on<sup>13</sup>. He is always shown in ageless or youthful representation. Tamilnadu Brahma is depicted, in the devakostha of the northern wall of the garbha grha and in the sala niches of the same wall, Brahma is standing in samapatha in the badhra niche of the northern wall. Brahma in standing posture holding rosary and Kamandala and gesturing abhaya and katikasta. He wears jata makuta, yajnopavita and udharabanda. His squarish face and gentle flowing tassels of the garment on either side indicate the typical chola style. Instead of Umbrella, which feature the Chola style, there is a lotus medallion over the image.

Sculptures Of Vyaghrapadesvarar Temple At Siddhalingamadam

DURGA

Goddesses of Durga, in the art of Tamilnadu, this specimen resembling contemporary chola images in all respects has four arms holding disc and conch in the upper hands and gesturing varada and katihasta in the lower hands. Durga is standing on the head of a buffalo. She carries disc, sword, Simhakarna mudra, gnanamudra, conch, shield, katakamudra and Simhakarnamudra. She wears a kritamakuta and a beautiful attire.

CHANDESVARAR

Chandesvarar is an important gnana of Siva. It is the age old practice in Siva Temples, that all transactions have been made in the name of chandesvarar. This is evident from the Number of Inscriptions. Chandesvarar was adopted as a son of siva, that is why he is called pilliyar. He is called Tondar Nayakar because he has been made the chief of Saiva devotees (Sivanadiyars).

The iconographic form of Chandesvaras is found separately in a different shrine, which is unattached to any temple as one of the parivara devatas of a siva temple. Sometime, he is accompanied by this wife Dharmanati. Chandesvarar is rare in the pallava Tamplem, but he is very common in the chola period.

Chandesvarar image is found on a sperate shrine in the first prakara of the kampaharesvara temple. This shrine is usually facing the south.

The image is installed in the centre. This two- armed figure is seated in a sukasana pose over a bhadrapitha placed in turn on an oblong pitha. His right leg is hanging down and rests on a special step adjoining the pitha his left leg is bent at the knee and kept horizontally on the seat. His right hand holds the axe in kataka hasta and his left hand is held in varada hasta. He wears kesabandha on his head. In the lowerseat a small devotee is depicted worshipping god in the right corner. This image expresses the Ideas and Teachinges adopted by the cholos of those days.

LAKSHMI GANAPATI

Ganapati, the god of obstacles and supreme godhead among Hindu believers today, is chief among the siva ganas having different names such as Vignesvara, Ganesa, Vinayaka and Pillaiyar. In puranic accounts he is treated as the son of Siva and Parvati and his iconographical form are seen in seated, Standing and Dancing postures. His worship traces its origin back to a very early period. the beginings of the form of Ganapati should be traced back to the dwars yaksha with elephantine face from an early railcoping at Amaravati. It is said that during the 3rd century B.C., Asoka's daughter had built a temple of Ganesa in Nepal. His cult became popular in the Tamil country during the seventh century A.D. Ganapati images of the pallava, chola and slightly later periods are distinguished mostly by the length of the trunk running down vertically on the paunch and finally curving to tough the sweets in the left palm. Popular iconographical forms of Ganapati found in the temple complex of Lakshmi Ganapathi. On the eastern gateway to the second prakara of this temple complex a round stone image of lakshmi Ganapati (holding the goddess or sakti on his lap) is found. The god is seated on a pedestal lifting his right leg conveniently enough to place the right foot on the pedestal. The goddess is seated on his left thigh. She holds a lotus in one hand while the position of the other hand is not clearly visible. She wears a Krita Makuta. Ganapati, who has ten arms, holds in the upper most right hand a disc and the upper most left at lotus flower. The lower most right and left hands hold a fruit and the goddess respectively. His proboscis is turned towards the left holding a fruit. Another image of Lakshmi Ganapati is seen in the western side of the third prakara.

Dvarapala (12th Century A.D.)

The dvarapalas (door-keepers) always in pairs are seen at the entrance of the sanctum in a temple. The earlier pallava dvarapalas appear very natural, and usually have a single pair of arms. These are replaced in chola structures with dvarapalas of fierce mien, with four arms. The sculptures at Thajavur and Gangaikonda Cholapuram are typical examples.

In the temple of Vyaghrapathesvarar Temple, the two dvarapalas stand guard at the door-way of the ardhha Mandapa. Both the dvarapalas are indicatical in style and posture. They are almost fecing front but slightly Turned to words the shrine shown in tribhanga posture with one leg on the ground and another is bent at the kee Joint. They are standing over the support of their club where palm of one hand is above the handle of the club, which is almost in side. The sculpture carry a trisula (trident) on their crown, have tusks protrudry from their mouths and coke terror with their knit eye-brows, rolling eyes and hands in the taryani (threatening) and vismaya wonder attitudes.

The armpit another hand is stretched along the side of the club. Top of the club, at Joint of the handle and the heavy base, is Snake entmining over that part. Both are shown wearing yajnopavita, Valayas Keyuras, Patra-Kundalas and Necklace. Above the head is Jata-Makuta, with Jata-bhara behind their head. Dvarapalas on the front central shrine entrance.

Sculptures Of Vyaghrapadesvarar Temple At Siddhalingamadam

CONCLUSION

The foregoing study portrays that the Vyaghrapadesvarar Temple at Siddhalingamadam is completely rebuilt during the later Chola Period and so carries modern structure. However, its antiquity is revealed from the presence of one Vinayaka Sculpture belonging to 7th Century C.E., There are some sculptural representations with less beauty. This study reveals that the temples need to be taken care of at least to protect the existing artistic embellishments.

REFERENCES

1. T.V. Mahalingam, Topographical list of Inscriptions in the Tamil Nadu and Kerala States, vol. II, S. Chand & company Ltd. Ram Nagar, New Delhi, 1988.
2. V.A. Rangacharya, Topographical list of the Inscriptions of the Madras Presidency, vol, VII, Asian Educational Services, New Delhi, 1985.
3. Annual Reports on Indian Epigraphy (1906-1910), The Director General Archaeological Survey of India Janpath, New Delhi, 1986.
4. Epigraphica Indica, Calcutta, 1894-1904.
5. S.R. Balasubramaniam, Early Chola Art and Architecture, Bureau of Tamil Publication, Madras, 1966.
6. A.L. Basham, A Cultural History of India, Clarendon Press, Oxford, 1975
7. G. Sethuraman, Facets of Indian Art and Culture, J.J. Publication, Madurai, 1995.
8. Valentine Tatransky, "Sculpture", Academic American Encyclopaedia, XVII(c. 1983).
9. H. Krishna Sastri, South Indian Images of Gods and Goddesses, Madras, Madras Government, Chennai, 1914.
10. T.N. Subramaniam, South Indian Temple, government Oriental Manuscript Library, Madras, 1953-57.
11. S.R. Balasubramaniam, Later chola temples, Mudgala Trust, Madras, 1979.
12. Barret, Douglas, Early Chola Bronzes, Bombay, 1965.
13. Barret, Douglas, Early Chola Architecture and sculpture, London, 1974.
14. T.A. Gopinatha Rao, Element of Hindu Iconography, Motilala Banarsidass, Delhi, 1968.
15. Margaret Stutley, "Bhairava" and "Chandesvarar" The Illustrated Dictionary of Hindu Iconography", London: Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1985.
16. C. Sivaramamurti, Nataraja in Art, thought and Literature, National Museum, New Delhi, 1974.
17. C. Sivaramamurti, The Great Chola Temples, Archaeological of India, New Delhi-2007.
18. Francis, W. Frederic Nicholson, C.S. Middlemis., and C.A. Barber, Gazetteer of South India, vol-II, Mittal Publications, New Delhi, 1988.
19. M.S. Govidanswamy, The Role of Feudatories in the later Chola History, Annamalai University, 1979.
20. C.R. Krishnamurthi., Saiva Art and Architecture in South India, New Delhi, 1985.
21. Kinsley., David, Hindu goddesses, Motilal Banarsidass, Delhi, 1987.
22. S.V. Subramanian, Heritage of the Tamils, Temple Arts, International Institute of Tamil Studies, Madras, 1985.
23. E.B. Havell, The Ancient and Medieval Architecture of India, John Murray, London, 1915.