ABSTRACT:

-Human rights are rights inherent to all human beings, whatever our nationality, place of residence, sex, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, language, or any other status. All human beings are entitled to enjoy certain rights without any distinction of caste, creed, religion, sex etc. But the reality is different; every human being is a victim of one or the other types of human right violation. In the modern world women's rights and gender discrimination have become buzzwords, particularly the Muslim women have become the centre of attention both at national and international level. However Islam has protected and promoted the women's rights in a great deal.

According to the Oxford Dictionary, Women's Rights are, "rights that promote a position of legal and social equality of women with men". According to the Webster's dictionary, "Women's rights claimed for women equal rights with those of men with respect to suffrage {right to vote}, property etc". The issue of women continue to dominate the Islamic world in particular, as there has been a very slow change in the position of women in the Islamic world as a whole. With few exceptions the age old laws have not been changed. The question of women's rights has acquired a great importance throughout the world and among all communities.
