ABSTRACT:

Since the end of bi-polar world order, the concept of security underwent a change from the traditional to individual centric notions of security. The individuals became the referent object of security and attained a position of prominence among the security related concerns. The nature of threats also changed from external aggression to intra-state conflicts.

Abstract Report: The Title Accurately Said The Study was About.

INTRODUCTION:

The post- cold war period has witnessed immense changes in the concept of security. There had been a paradigm shift from conventional i.e, state centric to non-conventional notions of security. The entire globe was confronted with several set of challenges. Many issues like environmental degradation, inequality in income distribution,terrorismetchave now confronted across globe in our age that was either hitherto missing or less visible in the security debate.
