ABSTRACT:

-India has the largest higher education system as the nation holds majority of its young population who are pursuing their education in colleges and universities. However, in spite of the significant progress made during the past few years, India’s higher education sector is still plagued with several challenges. No doubt, the Gross Enrolment Ratio has increased in the last two decades which has also enhanced the quality and transparency in the higher education.

Abstract Report: The Title Accurately Said The Study was About.

INTRODUCTION:

Higher education in India accommodates majority of younger generation in the institutions catering education. There are more than 45000 degree and diploma institutions in the country with approximately 25.9 million students enrolled for education. The last decade exhibits high growth with enrollment of students increasing at a Compound Annual Growth Rate (CAGR) of 10.8% and institutions at a CAGR of 9%.
