ABSTRACT

James Baldwin, an African American writer, presents the sufferings caused by alienation in most of his novels. His characters mostly being black and poor are isolated and excommunicated. They are made to feel as an unwanted lot in the society. They are stigmatized and debarred from establishing any contact with the civilized and cultural people, Whites. This kind of ill-treatments makes blacks feel guilty and shameful.

Introduction

The principal characteristic of the major characters become readily visible the existential reality of loneliness and estrangement. One is continually being jostled, yet longs, at the same time, for a human touch. The city appears in the novel as a wasteland in which each character struggles to live and relate to another in order to justify his own self-awareness and to renew continually his sense of being human.

REVIEWER COMMENTS

- This was a superb give an account of extremely intensive examination.
- The writing audit was careful, the approach was carefully exhaustive and fused the utilization of sufficient quantities of tests in dust size examination and blast tests.
- I discover no shortcoming at all with the routines, information examination, or conclusions.
- The work, as with all work advancing from this specific gathering, is generally sound.
