REVIEW OF THE ARTICLE

An Ethnographic Study Of The Dalu People Of Goalpara District, Assam

Jintu Hazarika

ABSTRACT:

The TITLE matches with the contents of the paper Ethnography is the scientific description of people and cultures with their customs, habits and mutual differences. Ethnography is crucial to international development because if we enact development programs without understanding the people who inhabit these regions, it is more likely that the programs will be ill-suited and unjust. The anthropology of development devoted to avoid these issues and critiquing development programs.

INTRODUCTION:

The introduction provides a good, generalized background of the topic that quickly gives the reader an appreciation Dalu is a lesser known community to the academic world, with a very few population scattered in different areas of Goalpara district, as well as in some parts of Darrang , Sonitpur, Nogaon, also in Meghalaya and Bangladesh. This paper is an attempt to through some lights on the micro-ethnic groups, living in Goalpara district. Though there is no any historical record from where they came, here in this paper whatever views are being expressed are based on my observation and contact with the Dalu people during fieldwork.

METHODOLOGY:

Author has not mentioned any specific methodology. This study was descriptive in nature. Must add methodology in your article. Methodology used to per research topic.

PRESENTATION OF RESULTS:

The amount of data presented was sufficient and appropriate Lastly I would say that Dalu is a lesser known community to the academic world, but like any other, it contributes to the ethnic diversity of the region. Dalu has its own distinct culture and tradition, and this paper is an attempt to throw some light on this community.

REFERENCES:

Prior publication by the author(s) of substantial portions of the data or study was appropriately acknowledged.

RELEVANCE:

The study was relevant to the mission of the journal or its audience. The study addresses important problems or issues; the study was worth doing.
