A Study On The Attitude Towards Regionalism Of High School Students In Relation To Social Intelligence

Y. Sophia

ABSTRACT:

The problem statement was clear and well articulated The present study attempts to find out the relationship between attitude towards regionalism and social intelligence of high school students. The investigator used normative survey method for collection of data by using Attitude towards regionalism scale (2016) and Social intelligence scale by Chadha and Usha Ganesan (1986). The investigator adapted random sampling technique for selecting the sample. The sample consisted of 400 high school students. The data collected from the respondent were analysed using mean, standard deviation, 't' value and co-efficient of correlation.

INTRODUCTION:

The introduction provides a good, generalized background of the topic that quickly gives the reader an appreciation Regionalism is a feeling or an ideology among a section of people residing in a particular geographical space characterized by unique language, culture etc. that they are the sons of the soil and every opportunity that exists in their land must be accorded to them first. Regionalism is an ideology and political movement that seeks to advance the causes of regions. As a process it plays role within the nation as well as outside the nation i.e. at international level.

METHODOLOGY:

Author has not mentioned any specific methodology. This study was descriptive in nature. Must add methodology in your article. Methodology used to per research topic.

PRESENTATION OF RESULTS:

The amount of data presented was sufficient and appropriate. Tables, graphs, or figures were used judiciously and agree with the text To sum up, the following are important conclusions arrived in the light of the present investigation; there is no significant relationship between attitude towards regionalism and social intelligence of high school students. But, there is no significant difference in the mean scores of attitude towards regionalism and social intelligence with regards to gender, locality, religion, community and type of school management.
